Bank Cashier On Coast Is Located

Had Wrong Kink in Head for 10 Minutes and Took $30,000

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—A teller of a Cleveland, Ohio, bank, who detectives said, "got a wrong kink in his head for 10 minutes," and stole about $30,000, was en route by train back to his home Wednesday after having been apprehended here at the end of a flight by airplane. The man, Charles S. Mills, 38, was taken into custody Monday by detectives and willingly began the return trip to Cleveland. He was found at a Los Angeles hotel carrying about $20,000 in a brief case. About $5000 of the money stolen was left in Cleveland and detectives estimated Mills spent "several thousand." "He's not what you would call a real criminal," detectives said. "He's a pleasant chap who got a wrong kink in his head for 10 minutes and did something he'll regret the rest of his life." The agents said they believed he took the money to get revenge against an official of the bank with whom he had a dispute. Mills has a wife and two children living in Cleveland.

Cigarette Stamp Ruling Is Revised

State Stamps May Be Applied to New Cellophane Wrappers

A state revenue department regulation requiring cigarette packages to be stripped of their cellophane wrappers when applying the 5-cent state stamp, has been withdrawn, and the stamp may not be applied to the cellophane wrapper, according to a letter issued October 25 by David A. Gates, commissioner of state revenues at Little Rock. Mr. Gates has issued instructions to wholesale and retail dealers in cigarettes that they must roughen the cellophane wrapper before applying the stamp, and will be held responsible for fixing the stamp so securely that it cannot be removed without destroying it. The commissioner's revised action was taken after a conference with manufacturers and dealers, who wished to co-operate with state officials but were unwilling to damage cigarette packages in the manner prescribed by the first ruling.

Hoover Is Charged With Navy Affairs Ignorance

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Hoover was charged by the Navy League Wednesday with exhibiting an "abysmal ignorance of why navies are maintained and of how they are used to accomplish their major mission." A printed pamphlet, issued in behalf of the league over the signature of William Howard Gardiner, president of the civilian organization which represents much of the naval sentiment for more powerful armament, carried this statement with an expression of regret. Then it concluded: "It has been necessary, however, to say what has been said above if we are to have a real appreciation of the impelling motives back of President Hoover's efforts, at every turn, to restrict, to reduce and to starve the United States navy—under the present plea of budget limitation on which we may have further cause to comment."

Missing Youth's Picture Identified

Noble Ayres of Texarkana Is Believed Victim of Triple Murder

DE QUEEN, Ark.—(AP)—William H. Phillips, Sevier county farmer, Wednesday night identified a photograph of Noble Ayres, 18, missing Texarkana school boy, in the "Texarkana Daily News," as that of the youth he directed to E. S. Chappell of Springfield, one of three murder victims. The youth was seeking a ride into Oklahoma. Ayres, son of P. A. Ayres, former Texarkana street commissioner, has been missing since October 1. Meanwhile, Sheriff Jim Sutton and a group of officers left for northern Arkansas on an investigation trip. James Broadstreet, who has been held as a suspect, was released after having proved an alibi. The body of the boy and a body identified as that of E. S. Chappell, Springfield fruit grower, were found in underbrush Sunday by Mrs. Ted Futral, whose 18-year-old stepson, Jack O'Dell, disappeared two weeks ago after going into the woods to investigate gunfire. O'Dell's body was found the next day near the spot where the two bodies were found later.

Officers have expressed the belief Chappell and a companion were killed and robbed and that O'Dell was slain as he came upon the scene. Mrs. Chappell told officers that her husband wrote her he was accompanied by a youth whom he had picked up on the road during a trip into Oklahoma with a load of apples. Identification clues turned toward young Ayres Wednesday when William Phillips, a farmer living a few miles from DeQueen, told officers and P. A. Ayres that he had talked with a youth accompanying Chappell on a road near here a few days before the murders are believed to have occurred. He said the youth closely resembled a photograph of young Ayres that appeared in newspapers. Only meager descriptions of the two victims were obtained before burial of the bodies Monday, but officers said these fitted the description of Ayres. Ayres' father will come here Sunday when the bodies are to be exhumed. Ayres disappeared from home without warning, carrying about $40. Before, however, he had hitch-hiked to Nocona, Tex., and schoolmates said he told them he intended to return to Nocona and marry a girl there. No trace of him has been found in Nocona.

Cotton Loan Basis To Be Retroactive

Growers Will Be Allowed Eight Cents Pound on Past Deliveries

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Cotton growers will be allowed eight cents a pound on past as well as future deliveries of cotton in payment to the government of their seed loans. Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, announced Wednesday that the Agriculture Department had agreed to allow this retroactive policy. "When the seed loan borrower," he said, "was delivered sufficient cotton on the basis of eight cents a pound to settle his loans he will be permitted to sell the remainder of his crop without any additional payment on his seed loan. All cotton that has been delivered, together with that as yet to be delivered, will be credited on the farmer's account at eight cents per pound less the proper deductions for six months carrying charges, such as insurance, storage and the like."

This 8 cent basic price applies only to cotton pooled through the association, according to Max Cox, manager of the Hope branch of the Mid-South Cotton Growers Association. For a grower to take advantage of this offer of securing 8 cents a pound for cotton applied against his seed or feed loans, he need only join the association, whereby he pledges all of his crop this year and next to be sold the co-op. The Hope branch office is doing a record-breaking business Thursday in securing new co-op members, stated Mr. Cox.

Bribe Testimony Sent Prosecutor

LITTLE ROCK—Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey Wednesday sent a transcript of the testimony given before the legislative investigating committee, in connection with the bribery charges made from the floor of the House of Representatives during the recent special session of the legislature, to Prosecuting Attorney Audrey Strait of Morrilton for his inspection. Mr. Strait said over telephone from Morrilton that although court meets at Russellville Monday, he would be unable to say whether the matter would be placed before the Pope county grand jury until he had studied the testimony and had conferred with Circuit Judge A. B. Priddy. Three members of the House charged from the floor that persons had approached them with offers of money to secure their votes for a sine die adjournment of the special session, during the controversy over the highway audit bill. They were Representatives J. W. Denney of Pope county, George N. Penner of Perry county, and W. C. Blackwell of Yell county.

Lewisville Bandits Change Motors and Escape in Louisiana

Car Used in Bold Holdup of Bank Is Rescued by Officers

CAR IS ONLY CLUE

G. T. May, Farmer, Sees Three Men as They Change Cars

LEWISVILLE—Three men who held up the First National Bank of Lewisville at noon Wednesday and escaped with $5000 were believed hiding in the Shreveport area Wednesday night after changing cars on a side road just off the main highway, six miles south of here, about 5 p. m. The car used in the robbery, a dark blue Chevrolet coupe with black wire wheels, was discovered by officers after they had been called to the scene by G. T. May, a LaFayette county farmer, who lives on the highway a short distance from the side road. May told officers he was attracted by the noise made by the three men as they shoved the abandoned car into a ditch. He said he saw them jump into another car of the same description bearing a Louisiana license and speed south on the main highway toward Spring Hill, La. Officers were unable to get a description of the three through to officials at Spring Hill, telephone operators reporting that wires were down along the road. The quick change made in automobiles and the mysterious cutting of wires led officers to believe a gang of bandits was operating over the country and possibly could have had a part in the $2500 robbery Tuesday of the State Bank of Omaha, Texas.

Car only clue

The abandoned car was the only clue officers had to work on Wednesday night in their efforts to apprehend the trio or to establish their identity. It was a standard Chevrolet coupe bearing Louisiana license tags with the numbers 209927. It had been driven 1800 miles and is believed to be a stolen car. A business card found in the floor of the machine bore the names of L. A. Robinson and T. E. Collins, oilfield trucking, 2701 Centenary boulevard, Shreveport, La. Several envelopes also found in the abandoned machine carried return addresses of the Standard Oil company, Tulsa, Okla. The bank was robbed at 12:25 p. m. one of the bandits remaining at the wheel of the car parked at the curb, while the other entered the building. The third man was believed to have been hiding under the turtle of the coupe at the time of the robbery. The bandit, upon entering the bank, forced Mrs. Dave Patton, assistant cashier, into the vault, scooped up the money and darted to the waiting automobile. They first drove south of the downtown section on the highway leading to Hope but circled a block and disappeared a few minutes later on the highway leading to Shreveport.

Mrs. Patton was the only person in the bank when the robbery occurred. She was in an almost prostrate condition from fright a few moments after the robbery. Another employee of the bank, returning from lunch, discovered Mrs. Patton in the vault about five minutes after the robbery. Mrs. Patton told officers both men were young. One of them had a mustache and the other was clean-shaven. One wore a hat and the other a cap. A posse of officers and citizens took pursuit in automobiles a few moments after the robbery.

Colonel Turner of Marine Corps Dies

Head of Aviation Service Fatally Injured by Whirling Propeller

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Naval radio informed Marine Corps fliers here Wednesday that their chief is dead. Col. Thomas C. Turner succumbed at a field hospital in Port au Prince, Haiti, to injuries caused Monday by a whirling airplane propeller. He flew the ship down from Washington to Haiti, landed at Gonives and got stuck in the mud. Going around to see how the ship could be freed, he slipped in the slush and the flying blade gashed his head. A naval tug made a vain race to take him to hospital. The injuries were beyond recovery and he died Wednesday afternoon. Turner was born in 1882 at Mare Island, Cal., where his mother Mrs. Mary Turner, still lives. He had made his home in Washington for years and left a widow, Mrs. Ethel Turner. He enlisted in the marines in 1901.

'Popeye' Pumphrey Commits Suicide

Memphian, Often in Trouble With Police, Ends Life at Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS—After writing two letters, one of which he addressed to his wife and the other to his mother in Mammoth Springs, telling them he intended to end his life, Neil K. ("Popeye") Pumphrey, 28, well-known police character of Memphis, entered the bathroom of the apartment that he and his wife occupied on Park avenue and sent a bullet through his head Wednesday afternoon. He was discovered by his brother-in-law and hurried to St. Joseph's infirmary, where he died a short time later.

About two years ago Pumphrey married Miss Ida Hoops of this city. Pumphrey was alone when he shot himself. Pumphrey was arrested here last year in connection with the hold-up of the Woodlawn-American National Bank of Birmingham, Ala. He was questioned by officers, but proved that he was not in Birmingham on the day of the robbery. In 1929 he was wounded in a shooting affray in Kankanas City.

Pumphrey agreed to accompany a local officer to Birmingham in order that employees of the bank might look him over. He chartered a plane and, accompanied by Detective Herbert Akers, flew as far as Brown's Wells, Miss., where he questioned Akers' authority to hold him. Akers had no warrant for Pumphrey and said he merely was accompanying "Popeye." Pumphrey next appeared in the headlines when, with Hubert Coates of this city, he was arrested in connection with gaming activities in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Both he and Coates were released. For some time Pumphrey has been suffering from poor health, and it is believed that caused him to kill himself. Besides his mother and wife, he is survived by a brother, said to reside in Memphis.

Preacher In Church War To Be Arrested

Jeffers Is Alleged to Have Married Couple Without License

JONESBORO—(AP)—Rev. Joe Jeffers, Baptist evangelist, was arrested Thursday on a charge of performing an illegal marriage ceremony. He furnished bond of $1,000 for his appearance at a hearing in municipal court Monday morning. Jeffers recently was the center of a controversy in the First Baptist church in which state troops were called out to preserve order between the factions.

JONESBORO, Ark.—(AP)—Charging him with performing an illegal marriage ceremony, a warrant for the arrest of Rev. Joe Jeffers, Baptist evangelist, and center of a bitter church controversy here, was issued in municipal court Wednesday.

As he was out of the city on a business trip, the warrant was not served on Jeffers immediately. Jeffers was expected back Wednesday night for a widely advertised open air meeting. The warrant charged him with marrying Jesse Nance of Flint, Mich., and Miss Celestine Byrd of Brubbs, Ark., without being qualified under the laws of Arkansas to perform a marriage ceremony. The marriage was performed October 16. The offense is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500.

Issuance of the warrant was one of the several controversies besetting the evangelist who claims to have "cleaned up" several oil boom towns in Texas.

His efforts to oust the Rev. Dow H. Heard, pastor of the First Baptist church here, precipitated a factional strife in the church and resulted in national guardsmen being called out to patrol the area of his tent tabernacle for three days.

After the guardsmen were recalled the unrest seethed inwardly. Early last Monday his tent tabernacle was destroyed by fire and he charged enemies of his revival with causing the blaze. Officers joined him in the theory of incendiarism. A grand jury investigation has been ordered. Shortly before that he was ordered to move his tent because of a disagreement over the rental being paid for the lot.

John M. Semple, Spokane alienist, testified for the defense, saying the boy suffered with a constitutional brain weakness, but that he was not definitely insane at the present time. The defense pleaded not guilty because of mental irresponsibility.

Two Youths Holdup Texarkana Grocery

Entering on Pretext of Being Hungry, Pair Stages Robbery

TEXARKANA—Entering on the pretext of begging for food two youths early Wednesday night held up the C. A. Moore Grocery store, 2022 West Seventh street, and escaped after rifling the cash register of approximately $25. Moore, the 60-year-old proprietor, was the only person in the store at the time of the robbery. He said the two bandits came in the front door and asked him if he had any food for two hungry boys. One of the boys had his hand concealed in his shirt front, and before Moore could reply suddenly drew a pistol. While the armed youth backed the proprietor away from the cash register, the other took the money. They then darted out of the door and made their escape down Seventh Street. Moore immediately notified Texarkana, Texas, police who began a search for the two. Although a speeding automobile passed the store shortly after the robbery, Moore told police he did not believe the youths were in a car. He said they came from behind the building when they entered. He described them as being young men, dressed roughly with caps pulled down over their eyes.

perintendent of the big lumber plant, he is chairman of Drainage District No. 7 and of the St. Francis Levee Board, as well as president of the Poinsett County Taxpayers Association. In connection with his activities with the latter organization Carlson is reported to have gathered considerable evidence against one or more officers of the county, which he intends to present to the next grand jury.

C. W. Albright, chief of police of Trumann and a deputy sheriff, said considerable time had been spent in investigating the shooting, and expects to have a clue in a few days. He said he suspected two former Arkansas convicts, who are believed responsible for a hold-up about five miles from Trumann last week and two other holdups at Jonesboro, 16 miles from here, the same night.

The chief said he talked with Carlson immediately after the shooting and again at Jonesboro, and on both occasions the wounded man said he believed robbery was the motive. The officer said Carlson told him the two men approached him, ordered him to hold up his hands and when he ran one of them fired. When their gun "jammed" the two men ran across the street, got into their car and sped away. It was raining at the time and few people were on the street. No one has been found who obtained the license number of the car.

Chief Albright said he was confident robbery was the motive and that "politics" had nothing to do with the shooting.

Harlan County States Probe to Be Welcome

HARLAN, Ky.—(AP)—Any committee to investigate conditions in Harlan county, scene of labor disorders which have claimed several lives, will be given fullest co-operation, Harlan county officials said Wednesday, but they emphatically denied charges of Theodore Dreiser, novelist, that a "reign of terror" exists in the coal fields here.

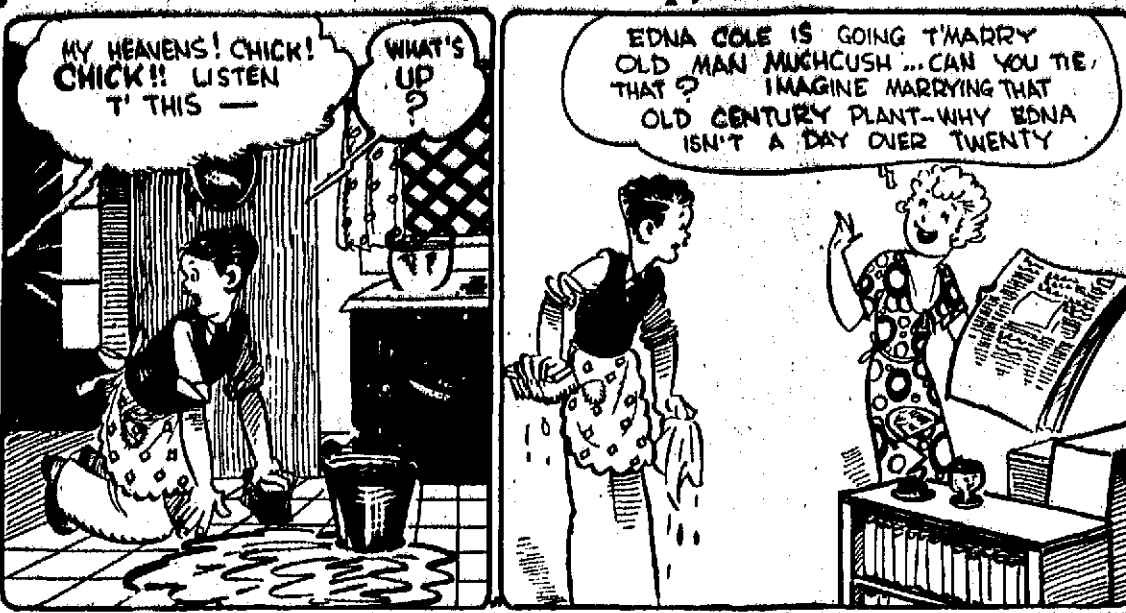

Dreiser Tuesday asked Senator Borah to seek a congressional investigation of conditions here. The senator said he would give the matter consideration. Dreiser recently attempted to organize an independent investigating committee, but met with little success, and three Kentuckians he appointed refused to serve.

The author in his latest statement said paroled convicts were being used as deputies by Sheriff J. H. Blair. The sheriff denied this, and Governor Flem D. Sampson's secretary at Frankfort denied on behalf of the governor that convicts were being freed to go to Harlan to serve as officers, as Dreiser claimed.

Baseball Mystery
HERE is the picture: the Cardinals, leading the Athletics in games, 3 to 2, play the sixth game of the recent world series before a crowd of nearly 40,000 people. The Athletics win. Next day the rubber game is played before a crowd of slightly more than 20,000, about half of the attendance of the sixth game. Just what is the answer, Watson?

Could it be the depression? Or, is the answer to be found in the fact that the exhibition of baseball staged by the Cardinals in the sixth game was so terrible that thousands remained away from the crucial game because they were disgusted with the team? Our operators are still at work on the problem.

Echo of Series
WHEN Babe Ruth was at the height of his career of banging baseballs out of the park, small boys on every lot in the country were copying his methods of batting, taking the old bat by the handle and swinging hard. Now will these same lots be filled with other boys, practicing the head-first and hook slides as demonstrated so thrillingly by Pepper Martin during the world series?

The deeds of the Pepper, along with the amazing accomplishments of Ben Chapman of the Yankees, may change the very quality of the game. The little Oklahoma wild man gave the world a picture that may become the symbol of a changing style of baseball—the crouching figure at first base—the suspense waiting for him to start—the arms and legs flying as he dashes for second—the throw—the headlong plunge and cloud of dust—and the umpire bent in the traditional signal that means "Safe" in every ball park in the country.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

PURDUE should have an advantage in football enrollment. Engineers come out of dear old Purdue by the hundreds . . . and settle in every part of the country where there is construction work . . . or where there are heating, pushing, hauling, tugging or other rough duties to be done . . . thinking alike of dear old Purdue and of educating his fellow man, the old grad hardly could be blamed for asking Gus Zille, a wheelbarrow man on a building job, if he wouldn't like to better himself at Purdue by studying Horace's Odes . . . and incidentally to stand there in the line and maul whatever people get in his way.

The Picture Play

THERE have been more notable feats than Pepper Martin provided, but none so spectacular and unexpected. The home run is indeed an admirable thing, but hasn't the hair-raising elements of the stolen base. The slide is a picture that must be seen to be enjoyed at its fullest. It is a picture play.

The Charm of Illegality

STEALING bases has part of the same quality that breaking the Volstead law gives to miscreants who enjoy violating it because they are partaking of forbidden fruits. It is under-cover stuff. Base runners are not supposed to fling defiance into the teeth of pitcher and catcher. Stealing bases is something that the player has to "get away with." Martin got away with murder.

Lumber Firm Official Is Shot Near Trumann

Carlson is a member of drainage board number seven at Trumann, a member of the district school board and president of the Poinsett County Taxpayers' Association. He recently conducted a campaign against what he termed "corruption" in Poinsett county official circles.

At least it's clear that today the man in the moon is a bootlegger.

Tammay Hall Backing Roosevelt in Battle

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Tammany Hall sides with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt on the proposed reforestation amendment which is approved by the governor and condemned by former Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Tammany has also notified its speakers that the organization favored the $20,000,000 proposal.

Surf Board Rider Conquers Channel

Waves Rasp Feet During Seven Hours Required to Cross

FILKESTONE, England.—(AP)—The English channel has been crossed in an even dozen ways, now that a young Frenchman, Roger Tronquet, has surfboarded across.

Up to the time Tronquet did his water toboggan act, the channel had been crossed by balloon, hydrocycle, motor-cycle, airplane, submarine, punt, canoe, glider, 11 ft. dinghy, water skis and the ordinary channel steamer.

Tronquet's feet were bleeding from the constant wash of water across the board when he arrived here. It took about seven hours to make the crossing.

His only reason was that no one else had tried it.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion; an emulsified cod liver oil that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with vitamin A, which soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creomulsion is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for the most common and dangerous ailments of the throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to cod liver oil, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creomulsion goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma, whooping cough, and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds and flu. Money refunded if any bottle of cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking creomulsion to directions. Ask your druggist for it.

Mixed Music Menus Pack 'Em in at Havana

HAVANA.—(AP)—The combination of open air restaurants, a la Parisienne and jazz bands in a Americana, originally designed for tourists' enjoyment, has taken the fancy of Havana natives.

Five restaurants in three blocks on the Prado, main boulevard, have almost every table taken each night. Each restaurant has an orchestra that doubles in jazz and native music.

Before Adolf Hitler sets up a dictatorship, he had better consult Al Capone. "Scarface" won't stand any music in.

CHAPTER XIV

"WHAT young man, Spence? What are you talking about?"

Mary eyed the old butler, fearful of what he might be about to reveal. He looked so vindictive as he held Eddie's topcoat aloft and glared at it as if he would have liked to shake its owner.

Under the stress of emotion, his usual West End English left him and the Cockney came out.

"He had the face, if you'll believe it, Miss, to call himself a doctor, and try to force his way in. Yes! And when I told him you'd neither invited him nor sent for him, that impudent he was he tried to walk past me into the 'ouse! I put my 'and up and I said 'None o' that, sir!' I said—"

"When was this, and who was it, Spence?" Mary demanded, impatiently.

"It was the night of your party, Miss Mary," the butler explained. "Of all them that came and asked to be let in without tickets, he was the freshest." Obviously the man's parting, like had left an indelible mark on the old servant's sensitive spot—his dignity. "Why he looked at me as if he'd have liked to do me in, that he did! But I thought as I explained about the jewels and the need to keep out thieves. But did he take it like a gentleman would? He laughed, if you'll believe it, and he called me an 'old fool,' he did, and said 'Mind you count the spoons!'"

His watchful mimicry would have been funny if Mary had not been so preoccupied with the identity of that mysterious visitor.

"But who was it, Spence? My brother?"

"Not your brother, Miss," Spence explained testily. "I told you as 'ow 'e was a stranger, and no gentleman, either." "Had that coat on, as sure as I'm living, with the collar turned up about his ears, like this."

"Are you sure?"

"Sure! When you come in like that, with that coat over you, it brought it back to me as plain as if he was standin' there."

"But this is Eddie's coat, my brother's," Mary told him excitedly. "Oh, Spence, would you know the man again if you saw him? Oh, do you see what this means?" She seized the surprised old servant by both arms and danced him around. "It means somebody else tried to get in, somebody else DID get in, and took the things and did it all, just as I said! Not Eddie! Oh, Spence, you old lamb—why didn't you tell me this before?"

card-table drawn up before the library fire. Early dusk had fallen because of the rain, and tea things sat disordered on the table between them.

Spence, rendered completely agog by the possibility that he had brushed horns with a thief and murderer, was in and out on a variety of self-made errands, ears open to hear all that was said. He had guarded the portals better than he knew, and virtue shone as a garland on his grizzled brow. He was convinced already that he had met the brute in single-handed combat, and subdued him by the majesty of his person, alone.

Mr. Jupiter, however, was slower to kindle over the idea.

"You can't be sure it's the same coat," he said. "If the man was a thief, would he try the front door?" He snorted disbeliever.

"It's the same coat," Spence reaffirmed stubbornly. "I've seen thousands of them in London, and not half a dozen in New York, sir. And it's old, sir, and fair in threads along the edges. Struck me odd at the time, sir, a man in evening dress like that sir, wearing a disgraceful coat like that—beggings your pardon, Miss Mary."

"It's old, surely," Mary agreed. "It was Dad's and Eddie came into it when Dad died. It was big for him, but he needed it—times when he hadn't any other."

Mr. Jupiter remained silent. He was unconvinced, but he was thoughtful. Mary continued eagerly. "I shouldn't have thought it the same coat, myself, only that it was the very same night, and his trying so hard to get in, and being so nasty about it. And Eddie's coat was gone, somehow—lost or loaned or something. I'm sure of it. Mr. Bowen, the reporter, and I both heard Eddie say plainly when he was lying in the ambulance, 'Make him give me back my coat.' And when Eddie came to meet me that day when—that day," she swallowed hard and went on, "he had no coat on, just his blue suit, all muddled and wrinkled. And it was cold. I remember I wore my fur jacket and nearly froze in that reporter's open car—"

"But he didn't get in, you say, Spence?" Mr. Jupiter turned to the butler.

"Not by the front door, sir, that's certain," Spence agreed. "But," he added with a side-glance at Mary, "the side door was open."

"And how would he know that?"

"He might just have tried it, sir, and found it open."

"Or mightn't he have heard Eddie telephoning me?" Mary put in. "Eddie knew all sorts of men, gamblers and so on. Mr. Bowen was telling me today there's a race-track gambler they call The Fly, and he thinks Eddie meant him when he was out of his head and mumbled. Only he wasn't out of his head—he knew what he was saying. But he was weak, and he wouldn't pay attention. That's what I believe!"

"Hold on," Mr. Jupiter chided. "You're going pretty fast. You been seeing that reporter lately?"

"Why, yes," Mary was a trifle dashed. "I—I lunched with him today. He's making an investigation on his own, and I've promised to help him."

good deal of difference. To me! And to—Eddie, even if he is dead and can't speak for himself. He was a foolish kid, but he wasn't bad—not a murderer! I won't stand by and hear him called one. Haven't I the right to clear his name if I can?"

The old man's eyes flashed. "The right to lose your young man, too, if you're not careful!"

"Lose Dirk? Why, what's that to do with it?" Mary asked aghast.

MR. JUPITER merely nodded wisely.

"You'll see," he said. "No, I won't say any more. It's his affair and yours. You might be right, but you can't prove it, and you'll only do yourself harm by stirring it up in the papers again. Better not let on to Emily Ruyther you've been seeing that reporter again. She's trying her best to stop the talk, and you're keeping it going."

"People are talking already. They don't know anything for sure, and that's why they're talking," Mary persisted. "As long as I live, the whispering will go on. Unless this is followed out to the bitter end, now, there'll always be a question-mark hanging over my head. 'What was that old story about her brother? Didn't he kill a woman and rob a house, or something?' Nobody can prove it, but they'll believe the worst. Even if it's hushed up. Especially if it's hushed up, they'll think it's true!"

"Rot. People forget. They won't dare yap about you if the Ruythers are back of you. And I aim to leave you a penny or two, remember. You'll be able to snap your fingers at 'em, anyhow."

Mary shook her head stubbornly. "Nobody's going to stand sponsor for me, least of all the Ruythers. And as long as you think—what you do about my brother, I can't take a cent from you. You see that, don't you?"

"Don't be a fool!" the old man burst out. "Nobody blames you. You're not going to Harkness, anyway. You're more like your mother. But your brother and his pals were two of a kind—full of wild schemes to get money without working for it. And they both ended up under ground, and no wonder. You can't tell me—"

Mary jumped up, red spots burning in both cheeks.

Before Jupiter could stop her—she was instantly sorry for his outburst—she had rushed from the room.

When Dirk arrived, she had bathed away the traces of tears and except for a new quietness, a new determination, in her manner, Dirk saw nothing amiss.

They drew the shades against the rain, and sat a while before the fire, hand in hand, her head on his shoulder, wordlessly happy. Mary wished that it might always be like this. She dreaded speaking, for sooner or later what lay between them must be discussed. If only she and Dirk could be married right away and go away from everything and everybody for a while!

But in the meantime, what of the man who killed Eddie? At this very minute he was alive somewhere, eating, drinking, laughing, making love—she shuddered involuntarily and Dirk's arm tightened.

"I called you but you weren't in," he said. Loverlike, his tone was faintly accusing. Mary stirred out of his arms. With his words, the whole disturbing day came to life again. Well, better get it over. "I saw Kane," she said. "Anything new?" Dirk reached for a cigaret.

"New—for me," Mary said wryly. "He told me the truth, for once. Dirk's look was startled.

"What did he say?"

"Why, just that the investigation is being dropped. Everyone seems to think Eddie is guilty."

"I wouldn't say that exactly," Dirk said evenly, after a pause. "Then why?"

THE worried look had come into his eyes again. Mary could have taken him into her arms and smoothed it away, but she held herself aloof for his next words.

"Don't you think yourself," he asked, evading her eyes, "that it would be pleasant to keep your name out of the headlines, just now?"

It was true then. Was he speaking for his mother, or himself?

"I'm sorry if it annoys you," she said stiffly.

"Don't be huffy," Dirk pleaded, drawing her back into the circle of his arm again. "You know what ever you do is all right with me, always. But other people have notions. Take mother, now."

"I see," said Mary.

"She's old school, you know, and any unpleasantness reflecting on the family name goes right to her pride. It's all foolishness, of course."

"Then why do you cater to her?" "Because she's my mother, I guess." This should have been a clinching argument, Mary realized, but somehow it wasn't.

"I have a duty, too, to the Harkness name, such as it is," Mary reminded him. "I'm afraid I must see it through."

Dirk kissed her fingers tenderly, his lips lingering on her ringed third finger.

"Surely it's not necessary now," he teased, gently. "A month more and you'll be Mrs. Dirk Ruyther. Had you forgotten?"

Mary hadn't. For several moments they were oblivious of everything but that unbelievable fact.

"You're not going to mind, are you, if Mr. Bowen and I follow up those clues he has?" Even as she recounted the news of the coat excitedly, she was aware that Dirk's manner had hardened suddenly, that he was definitely angry now.

"Don't you know better," he said with measured, reproving accents, "than to talk to newspapermen?"

"But surely," Mary asked, amazed, "Mr. Bowen's harmless! Why, he's done more to clear up the matter than anybody else—the police, or you, or anybody."

"And why has he? For the sake of a story, that's why!"

Stumbingly, Mary tried to defend her own estimate of Bowen. She felt that Dirk was unfair, but she did not know how to refute his charges.

"Society," and millions, and a pretty girl!" Dirk went on. "If that isn't a perfect combination for him, I don't know what is! And you let him drag you into it all over again, just when we'd got it stopped!"

"Oh, so you did stop it?"

"I did. And it stays stopped, if I have anything to say about it!"

They faced each other, breathing hard. Mary had not dreamed they could ever quarrel like this.

"It is not over for me. It will never be over, until I've found out what the truth is!" Mary was shaking as she issued her ultimatum.

Dirk snapped, "Very well. But don't see this man Bowen again."

"I'll see him as often as it's necessary."

"Then—good night," Dirk turned on his heel and strode angrily to the door.

Lights From Shops Brighten Streets

Formerly Dark Streets of Moscow Turned Into "White Way"

MOSCOW—(AP)—After several years of barren stores with drab, darkened windows and down-at-heel stocks Moscow's shopping center is being turned into a "white way."

New stores are being opened, and recent decrees, reflecting the government's recognition that it pays to advertise, have ordered that all stores must dress their windows and light them each evening.

A transformation has resulted in the main business thoroughfares, Tverskaya and Petrovka. Many shops which heretofore either failed to display their wares, or heaped them in the windows in vagrant disarray now fairly glitter.

Only a few were lighted at night before; now all attract the passersby. Even the food stores draw hundreds of window shoppers by neat piles of canned goods and produce.

As more stores are opened the number of deserted shops that darkened every block until a few months ago are decreasing. This has had the effect also of reducing the queues, long a Russian institution.

Frozen Bank Assets to Oppose Hoover Project

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The might of President Hoover's half billion dollar credit pool will be thrown within a few days against the nation's economic obstacle of frozen bank assets.

With subscriptions pouring in from all parts of the country, the chief executive has been informed that the credit extension plan has already wielded a potent influence toward restoration of confidence.

By the end of the week, he expects the organization to be ready to function actively on its task of helping banks turn their gilt-edge, but frozen, assets into ready cash for trade channels.

Bureau Head Collapses on Duty at Washington

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—George K. Burgess, director of the bureau of standards, collapsed at the bureau Wednesday while presiding over a meeting of bureau chiefs.

He was taken to emergency hospital where it was said his condition was undetermined.

F. R. Brunot, public health service physician on duty at the bureau, said Burgess had a "slight attack" of cerebral hemorrhage.

The bureau director is a native of Newton, Mass.
